STANDARDIZING THE AUTHOR CONTRACT

THE basis of the publishing business, legally speaking, is the contract with the author. The author, as the creator of the work, is its sole owner, unless he is employed "for hire," and therefore holds all rights which are not transferred to the publisher, as the states under the Federal Constitution reserve all rights not conveyed to the nation. On the other hand, the publisher with his business experience is better equipped than the author himself to act for him in business relations and therefore it is to the advantage of the author, under proper safeguards, to utilize the publisher in realizing the full value of his work. In old days, the book rights and the periodical rights were of chief value to an author, but of late years, what with the "movies" and other modern developments, these other rights are of equal and sometimes of greater value. The contract between author and publisher should, therefore, be comprehensive and exact, specifically including or excluding these secondary rights.

Before these modern developments the contract was comparatively a simple matter and tho there was no standard form of contract, publishing contracts had a close similarity and were comparatively easy of interpretation. In recent years publishers have modified their contracts from time to time to meet changing circumstances, and there is probably less similarity than of yore. A standard form of contract, which shall admit of easy modification in writing, is therefore extremely desirable and the Authors' League has already taken a number of steps toward the formulation of such standardized contract. A first draft, made some three years ago, did not prove mutually satisfactory to publishers as well as authors, but the League has had active committees on publishing contracts in the various fields of law books, text books, fiction, etc., and is this year again endeavoring to obtain general co-operation with publishers—an endeavor which should be frankly and sympathetically met from the publishing side.

It was the intention to include a suggested form of a standard contract in "Copyright—Its History and Its Law," but the undertaking of that work developed such proportions as to make the additional feature impracticable. We propose now to give from time to time special attention to a standard form of contract in its several features with a view to mutual and specific co-operation in developing a form which shall be satisfactory both to authors and publishers.

The first aim of such a contract should be to make it as simple, as clear, as compact as possible, while comprehensive of the several rights which an author may convey, and fitted to permit such variations as variant circumstances may require. The recent suit of DeBekker v. Stokes, of which the conclusion is reported in another column, forms an interesting opportunity for illustrating some of the points that should be considered in discussing a standard contract.

The author's side of this case is quite fully stated in the report printed elsewhere, and the decision based on the contract as a complete legal agreement was in the author's favor. It was specifically held, however, in the opinion of the presiding judge of the Appellate Division that the author's name was not a part of the title and that the author could not require the publisher to include his name on the title page, in the absence of provision to that effect in the contract. The author's contention that the subscription edition, issued by and under the imprint of another house, required his assent, since that was not included specifically in the contract, was upheld by the Court in accord with legal precedent and was the substantial basis of the decision.

The publishers' side, based upon the custom of the trade and upon conversations preceding or concurrent with the contract, was rather a case in equity, and seems not to have been fully presented as such to the court. The work was a compilation for which the plan was worked out in conversation between author and publishers. Instead of an outright sum or arrangement "for hire," as at first discussed, reckoned at from $1000 to $1200, the publishers agreed to pay $500, and in consideration of future revision five per cent. royalty on all copies sold within the United States thru the regular trade, with the addition of an outright sum of $150 for the "complete rights" for "subscription, premium or special advertising sales" if sales were made in any of those ways. The publishers were to have the rights in the United States, Canada and elsewhere, but the royalty was specifically confined to sales within the United States.

The first edition of the work was severely criticized by a leading Boston critic and an early revision was made by the author at the publishers' request. The sale of the work proved disappointing, less than 1500 copies in all having been marketed. The publishing house having no subscription department, an arrangement was entered into with the University Society, Inc., under which it included this work as two volumes of a ten-volume encyclopedia of wider scope, the editor's name being omitted from the two volumes, while the name of a well-known musical writer was given as general editor. The publishers stated that the omission was made to avoid bringing the subscription edition into close competition with the trade edition. This naturally raised a question, altho, as above stated, one of the judges held, also in accordance with precedent, that the author's name was not a part of the title and need not be given. The decision awarding returns to the author on the six thousand copies sold by subscription seems to have been based on the omission from the contract of any specific authority from the author to sell the work thru other publishers under another imprint; and the publishers, relying on the breadth of the contract, did not bring into the pleadings the custom of the trade and conversations with the author which, if admitted, might have had some bearing upon the decision.

It is the custom of the trade to provide for other editions of a book, in the joint interest of author and publisher, as in the case of cheaper editions of the reprint publishing houses, under the general authority of the usual contract, without specific assent from the author. It has been the general practice to consult the author specifically only when special arrangements are made for royalties on a different basis than that provided for in the contract. Nevertheless, it may be said that while the custom of the trade may be cited as between members of the trade, it is doubtful whether one outside or new to the trade as an author, can be expected to be informed of and bound by a trade custom.

This point in the case, and others as well, illustrate the need of a contract form, re-made in view of legal decisions and comprehensive of the many present relations of authorship which will avoid in the future such questions as have been raised in this case. We shall discuss later the further questions involved. It is to be regretted, we may add, that the arbitration clause provided for in the contract was not availed of by the author.

THE poor little rich girl has been neglected too long. She has not been allowed to go to the children's room in the library, where little immigrant children have been turned loose, and her own books have too often been bought at random by parents with excellent intentions, but no special knowledge of the field of juvenile literature. Even her school has probably not been so systematic in the spread of book lists as has the public school—for the poor little rich girl is supposed to get plenty of intellectual stimulus at home. Now, however, her troubles are over, in Boston at least, as an article printed elsewhere in this issue will demonstrate. For in Boston they have started a real bookshop for boys and girls, a specialty shop made "just as attractive as a milliner's!" Truly, books are coming into their own. Every effort has been made, in the first place, to give the shop a home atmosphere, and in the second place, no pains have been spared to gather a collection of really worth-while and entertaining books. Instructive books that are also dull are worse than no books at all. Better to keep the desire to know dormant a while longer than to kill it at the first sign of its awakening. For this reason, it is essential, say the projectors rightly, that the children's bookshop should be in the hands of a specialist. Only one who has the confidence born of a thoro knowledge of the subject, indeed, can hope to succeed in this limited field. That the field of the specialty book shop for children is limited, is apparent. Only the larger cities can support such a venture. But all the larger cities have not yet been covered. With the exception of Miss Emerson's Child

Lore Bookshop in New York and Miss Throop's in Brooklyn, there have been few efforts of the kind. Incidentally, it is interesting to note that the bookshop for children is the ideal field for women—and the bookshop run by women, thanks, possibly, to Mr. Earl Barnes, has already ceased to be a novelty.

FROM the extent to which the New York law regarding publication of notice of stockholders' meetings is ignored we fear that only too many corporations are unaware of its existence. The Stock Corporation law of New York State provides very clearly (sec. 25) that:

"Notice of the time and place of holding any election of directors shall be given by publication thereof, at least once in each week for two successive weeks immediately preceding such meeting, in a newspaper published in the county where such election is to be held."

It is true that no specific penalty is provided in the statute for non-compliance; but it is also true, as the Journal of Commerce points out, that (should anyone wish to raise objection later) directors elected at a stockholders' meeting, held without the statutory notice, are not legally directors at all and may be ejected on a stockholder's suit, and that, if these "directors" seek to bind the corporation by a contract, they may find that they have legally bound only themselves personally or that the other party to the contract may refuse to consider the contract binding. The subject is suggested by a query regarding the possibility of New York City publishing corporations advertising their regular meetings of stockholders in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. We are told that such publication fulfills every requirement of the law.

A RECENT issue of Printers' Ink tells a little advertising true story that seems to us to have not one but several morals. A western brickyard was selling ordinary brick, under ruinous competitive conditions, at $8.90 a thousand. Somebody conceived the idea of picking out the best ones and delivering them, packed in hay (to seem more choice), at $9.40. The scheme worked so well that it was decided to give them a name and advertise the name. Presto! Homestead Face Brick, "without in any way altering product or delivery," brought $13 a thousand, and sales at the same time "increased tenfold." The same brick plus advertising brings 50 per cent. more than the identical brick without, and the public eager to pay the 50 per cent. The incident throws light on the value of advertising; it is also, it seems to us, the sort of thing that gives economic critics of advertising just the sort of exception they rejoice in getting.

FINAL DECISION IN DE BEKKER-STOKES CYCLOPAEDIA CASE

EXCEPT for the matter of an accounting, to be made before a referee, the State court proceedings instituted by L. J. de Bekker against the Frederick A. Stokes Company and the University Society, Inc., ended with the decision of the Court of Appeals, rendered in Albany, October 24, in favor of the author.

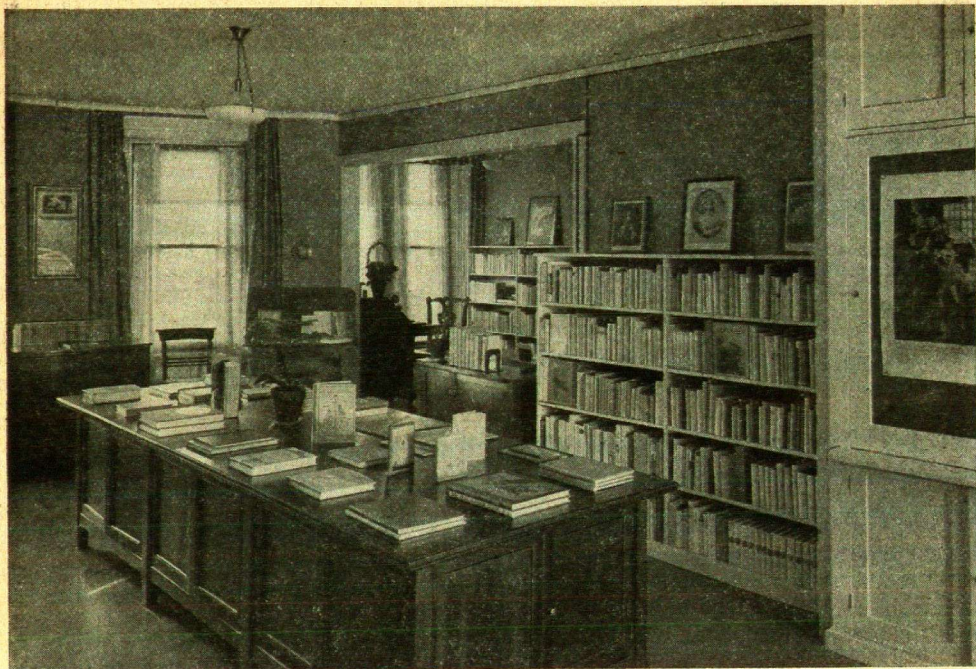

Mr. de Bekker, who has been a member of the editorial staff of the New York Evening Post for the last four years, and was previously with the Tribune and other New York newspapers, has written and compiled several books. He is the compiler of "Stokes' Encyclopedia of Music and Musicians," first published by the F. A. Stokes Company in 1908. One year later a second edition, revised by the author, was published. In 1912, Mr. de Bekker states, he learned for the first time that his work had been included as two volumes of "The Standard Musical Encyclopedia," with the imprint of the University Society, subscription publishers, the author's name omitted, and the name of Louis C. Elson, the Boston music critic and editor of the entire ten volumes, given as "Chief Editor." He then sued both corporations for damages, a rescission of the contract, restoration of copyright, an injunction and an accounting.

The case was heard by Justice Russell Benedict in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, April 28, 1914. He granted the relief prayed for, May 20, 1914, as recorded in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for June 27, 1914. The Stokes Company contended that, as the contract authorized them to issue a subscription edition for an outright sum in lieu of royalties, which sum was duly credited against advance payments and so reported in the ordinary course of accounting, they were justified in making the arrangement with the University Society without need of consultation with Mr. de Bekker. From Justice Benedict's decision defendants appealed to the Appellate Division, which ordered a new trial, but later modified its order and handed down the decision recorded in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for May 6, 1916.

The case was carried on appeal to the Court of Appeals at Albany. Four questions were certified:

Question No. 1: "Was the contract made between the Frederick A. Stokes Company and the University Society, Incorporated, on October 5, 1910, made in violation of the plaintiff's rights under or reserved to the plaintiff by his contract with the defendant Stokes Company dated the 10th day of July, 1907?" To this question the Court of Appeals replied in the affirmative.

Question No. 2: "Did the defendant Frederick A. Stokes Company, by the payment of

THE NEW "BOOKSHOP FOR BOYS AND GIRLS," BOSTON

$150 to the plaintiff under clause E of the contract, acquire such complete rights in said work under the contract of July 19, 1907, as entitled the defendant Frederick A. Stokes Company to contract with the defendant University Society, Incorporated, for the latter defendant to sell the work of the plaintiff in the name of the University Society, Incorporated, as two volumes of a ten-volume set known as the Standard Musical Encyclopedia, bearing the imprint of the University Society, Incorporated, without the imprint of the Frederick A. Stokes Company and without the name of the plaintiff appearing in any way?" To this question the Court of Appeals replied in the negative.

Question No. 3. "Was the making of the agreement between the defendants Frederick A. Stokes Company and University Society, Incorporated, for the work of the plaintiff as two volumes of a set of ten volumes known as the 'Standard Music Encyclopedia' such a violation of the rights of the plaintiff under or reserved by his contract with the defendant Frederick A. Stokes Company, dated the 19th day of July, 1907, as to warrant a judgment directing a rescission of such contract as of the 5th day of October, 1910, the date of the contract between the University Society, Incorporated, and the Frederick A. Stokes Company." To this question the Court of Appeals replied in the affirmative.

Question No. 4. "Did the plaintiff, under his agreement with the Frederick A. Stokes Company, dated the 19th day of July, 1907, retain any residuary interest in the work therein described, other than the privileges contained in Article Fifth, subdivisions A and B, and a right to pecuniary compensation from said defendant after such work had been copyrighted in the name of the defendant Frederick A. Stokes Company and the work had been published by the sales of copies thereof." To this question the Court of Appeals replied in the affirmative.

No opinion other than the replies to these questions was handed down by the Court of Appeals.

An order was accordingly entered, affirming the judgment of Justice Benedict as modified by the Appellate Division, with costs.

It should be stated in explanation of the judgment that the $600 accredited to the defendant Stokes Company was in advance of royalties on an "Encyclopedia of Plays, Players and Playwrights," the manuscript of which was never delivered by the author.

The contract was the ordinary printed form of the publishing house, with written modifications of substantial importance providing in this case for an outright payment of $500 and additional royalties on copies sold within the United States, contingent upon revision of later editions by the author. The defendants claimed that the purchase of "complete subscription rights" included the right to issue the work under the imprint of a subscription house. They contended in their brief before the Court of Appeals that "this appeal raises issues never heretofore decided in the court of this state. It partakes of the nature of a test case."

ANOTHER CORNER OF THE "BOOKSHOP FOR BOYS AND GIRLS"

Mr. de Bekker's lawyer was Harold G. Aron, of Aron & Vanderveer. Counsel for the publishers were Frederick Trevor Hill and Richard Steel.

The amount involved is, of course, not yet determined.

BOSTON HAS BOOKSHOP FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

THE specialty bookshop for boys and girls is not merely a possibility. Such a shop—the Bookshop for Boys and Girls—was opened on October ninth by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union at 264 Boylston Street, Boston. Miss Bertha E. Mahony is director of the new shop; Miss Margaret E. Sayward, assistant director and story-teller; and Miss Alma W. Howard, assistant.

The Bookshop for Boys and Girls rests on the excellent foundation of three sound ideas: (1) Since taste for good books is one of the most important factors in the development of understanding in youth, and one of the most constant satisfactions in later years, every stimulus and help should be given in selecting books, even picture books, to arouse this taste in children; (2) that this careful selection may be greatly aided by a discriminating bookstore; (3) that books deserve as pleasant a setting as, say, hats and gowns, and as comfortable means for their careful examination.

The directors of the bookshop began by carrying out the principles of the third idea. The setting for the books is a long, low-ceilinged, second-floor room, with front windows framing vistas of the gardens; at the rear, soft-curtained windows, filled with flowering plants and ivys; twin fireplaces, piled with logs ready for lighting on some cold November day; hangings of friendly blue; here a rush-bottomed armchair beside a low chest of drawers filled with picture books for very little folk. On the walls are pictures of quaint little maids, or famous paintings interesting to childhood. These pictures (framed) range in price from those for the nursery at 75 cents to hand-colored prints at $25. Original bookplates for children are on sale, and the work of young artists will be exhibited occasionally.

But the books are of chief importance. Here is the display of Mother Goose and kindred works, and, at the other extreme of child development, there is a gathering of books on art on the fireplace mantel, against a tree-of-life tapestry. Not dead and dull works, either! A group of Russian and French picture books and Swedish ones, too, are lying on a chest between the front windows. There are splendid collections of biography, poetry, home, school and college stories, adventure and sea stories, handicrafts and occupations, out-of-door books, and so on. During the week just past the Bookshop held a special display of boys' books on many subjects, including the official Boy Scout Library.

To help in the selection of books for purchase, the Bookshop has prepared a catalog, approved by three well-known librarians: Miss Caroline M. Hewins, Hartford Public Library; Miss Clara W. Hunt, Brooklyn Public Library; and Miss Alice M. Jordan, Boston Public Library. This catalog, which is an unusually attractive piece of work, may be had on application for ten cents.

Another feature of the new store's work is the proposed series of story hours for children. Beginning in January, 1917, the Bookshop's story-teller will conduct three series of subscription story hours for children of various ages. The hours will be divided as follows:

Group 1.—Children from 5 to 7 years of age:

Fables, wonder tales and nature stories.

Tuesdays at 4.

January 16, 23, 30; February 6, 13, 20.

Group 2.—Children from 7 to 10 years of age:

Fairy tales, myths and legends of various countries.

Thursdays at 4.

February 8, 15; March 1, 8, 15, 22.

Group 3.—Children from 10 to 15 years:

Hero stories and ballads.

Fridays at 4.

February 23; March 2, 9, 16, 23, 30.

Stories of fun and nonsense are included in each group, as well as a good proportion of poetry. The groups are limited to 12 children each. Series tickets, $5.

On March 3, 1917, and the four Saturday mornings following, the Bookshop will present Miss Marie L. Shedlock in a series of story hours for adults. The definite program will be announced later. These last will not be held in the Bookshop, however.

EARLY CHILDREN'S BOOKSHOPS

A "JUVENILE BOOKSTORE" is not a twentieth-century, or even a United States project, says Caroline M. Hewins, librarian of the Hartford Public Library, in an interesting prefatory article in the catalog of the Bookshop for Boys and Girls in Boston. John Newbery, of London, altho only about half of his publications in his business career, between 1740 and 1767, were little books for children, had "Juvenile Library" in the place of honor over his door, while "Bookseller and Stationer" was on each side and "School Supplies" above. He might have added "Patent Medicines," which were a part of his stock in trade that he left by his will to his son Francis, who after a dozen years gave up the bookselling business, which passed into the hands of his cousin and namesake, whose wife afterwards carried on the business. By 1800 it was owned by John Harris, who kept on at the old stand for about thirty years, when the firm name became Griffith & Farran, who published books until 1910.

Not long after Harris' name appeared on the sign there were at least three other juvenile libraries in London, and the owners of two of them followed Newbery's example in advertising their wares in their story books. At the end of the first edition of "Goody Two-Shoes" (1766) is a list of forty-two "Books usually read by the scholars of Mrs. Two-Shoes, sold at Mr. Newbery's, at the Bible and Sun in St. Paul's Churchyard"; and in the story itself, the "Travelling Tutoress" sang to one of her pupils "The Cuzz's Chorus," which may be found in The Little Pretty Plaything, published by Mr. Newbery.

Tabart & Co., at the Juvenile and School Library, No. 157 New Bond Street, pursued the same course in "Visits to the Juvenile Library," 1805, with illustrations said to be by William Blake, but probably only engraved, not designed, by him. Five spoiled children are encouraged to love reading by a visit to the library, of which a view is given in one of the four copperplate "embellishments." "What, are all these books written for children?" they were ready to exclaim," and went away with several volumes apiece, ingeniously advertised by name.

In the same year, William Godwin, novelist, biographer, historian, and political writer, but better known now as the husband of Mary Wollstonecraft and the father of Mary Shelley, had hard work to provide for his composite family, which included his first wife's daughter and his own, besides his second wife's two Clairmont children and his and her baby. Mrs. Godwin, being or believing herself a woman of some business ability, opened at 41 Skinner Street, Holborn, a juvenile and school library, for publishing and selling books in her own name. In order that her husband might not be known to be doing work beneath the dignity of a grave historian, he wrote several little historical books for the library under the name of Baldwin, his foreman, and Theophilus Marcliffe. Charles and Mary Lamb, who were friends of the Godwins, wrote for the Skinner Street house their "Tales from Shakespeare" and "Poetry for Children." Charles retold "The Adventures of Ulysses" in prose and put into verse "Prince Dorus" and "The King and Queen of Hearts," which were illustrated by Mulready, and wrote one or two of the stories in Mary's "Mrs. Leicester's School." In this book, the juvenile library is advertised as ingeniously as St. Paul's Churchyard is brought before the public in "Goody Two-Shoes." Emily Barton's words are: "Papa said, 'Emily shall take home some little books. Shall we order the coachman to the corner of St. Paul's Churchyard, or shall we go to the juvenile library in Skinner Street?' Mamma said she would go to Skinner Street, for she wanted to look at the new buildings there. Papa brought me seven new books, and the lady in the shop persuaded him to take more, but mamma said that was quite enough at present."

Mrs. Godwin's juvenile library was in Skinner Street till 1823, when the family was entangled in a lawsuit and obliged to move. The latest imprint that I have seen is of 1824: "Printed for M. J. Godwin & Co. At the French and English Juvenile and School Library, 195 (St. Clement's) Strand."

Title-pages show that John Sharpe had a juvenile library in the London Museum, Piccadilly, in 1818, and that H. R. Thomas published and sold books in another in Hanover Street, Hanover Square, in 1826. A small edition of Watt's "Divine Songs, in easy language, for the use of children," was published by G. Ross in Edinburgh without date, and sold for twopence. On the cover is printed inside an oval, "From Ross's Juvenile Library."

In Philadelphia, in 1802, Benjamin Johnson sold books for children at 31 High Street, and Jacob Johnson later at 171, which was called the Juvenile Library, as a cover dated 1819 shows, altho the title-page bears the imprint, "Johnson and Warner, 1810."

Four books in my collection have on the pasteboard covers, "Published and sold by H. Conrad and E. Parsons, corner of Fourth and Ches[t]nut Streets, 1835"; but two have on the title-pages the imprint of John Sharpe, London Museum, 1818, one has Tabbard & Co.'s "at the Juvenile and School Library, 157 New Bond Street, March 1st, 1805," and the fourth was printed in London, 1823, for three other firms, without the Juvenile Library name. The four books are in excellent condition, "as new," and were evidently bought at a trade sale in London and brought over in sheets.

Morgan & Keaser had a juvenile bookstore at 14 Chestnut Street, and published books "embellished with neat coloured engravings," undated but with costumes of about 1820.

William Wood, an English member of the Society of Friends, had a juvenile bookstore at 357 Pearl Street, New York, from 1806 till about 1822, when his son William became his partner and the firm began the business of publishing medical books, which it has continued ever since.

Mahlon Day had a juvenile bookstore at 374 and 376 Pearl Street, tho he dropped the "juvenile" after 1835.

These are all the juvenile bookstores of which I have found record on title-pages, but there were others that might have borne the name, established by Darton in London, King in New York, Munroe and Francis in Boston, and Sidney Babcock of New Haven and Charleston, some of whose toy and pasteboard-covered books were written by "Thomas Teller" (George Tuttle). Pease & Co., Fisk & Little, and William B. Sprague sold colored picture books in Albany between 1830 and 1850.

NEW YORK HAS BOOK-SHOP FOR WOMEN

THE Woman's Book-Shop, a bookstore planned and stocked for women, was opened at Lexington Avenue and 52d Street on Monday of this week. The venture is under the general direction of the Publishing Department of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A. This department publishes reviews of selected books in the Association Monthly and also sends out exhibits of books to various Y. W. C. A. conferences over the country. Between $6000 and $7000 worth of book orders came to the Association thru these two mediums last year, in very many cases from small towns where there were no adequate bookselling facilities, and it is partially to handle this business that the new store has been established.

Miss G. L. Esten, the director of the new shop, hopes, however, to make the venture succeed as a local bookstore, entirely aside from this mail order feature. Situated as it is in the Y. W. C. A. Training School Building, but a few steps from the Women's University Club, next door to the new site of the Central Branch of the Y. W. C. A., and in an up-town residence district, the store is expected to appeal to a wide circle of women book-buyers. The stock centers around a carefully selected list of books on the woman movement and sociology and in addition there is the better class of fiction, books on modern aspects of religion, juveniles and a few standard sets.

In architecture the shop resembles the Lord & Taylor type rather than the ordinary bookstore. The two long, high ceiled rooms, divided by a six-foot row of book cases, are attractively and informally furnished and on the colder days a fire will be kept going in the generous open fire-place.

H. E. HUNTINGTON BUYS BRITWELL AMERICANA FOR $350,000

HENRY E. HUNTINGTON has just acquired for a sum, said to be $350,000, the famous collection of Americana from Britwell Court, Burnham, England, which George D. Smith bought last August. There are 390 items in the collection, which was the property of S. R. Christie-Miller, and which was to have been dispersed at auction beginning Aug. 15 last, at Sotheby's, London. On account of the rarity of the items great interest was aroused in the auction. Mr. Smith made a trip to London and purchased the entire collection by private treaty. He brought the collection to New York, and has finally sold it en bloc to Mr. Huntington.

Perhaps the most precious book in the collection is the volume of Massachusetts laws printed at Cambridge in 1660. Only two copies are known, and Mr. Huntington now has both. The recently acquired volume is valued at $15,000. Its title is "The Book of the General Lawes and Libertyes concerning the Inhabitants of the Massachusetts collected out of the Records of the General Court, for the Several Years wherein they were made and established."

Another volume valued at $15,000 is "New Mexico, otherwise, the Voyage of Anthony of Espeio," published about the year 1587, and which is excessively rare. It narrates the adventures of the Spanish explorer who, according to the sub-title "in the year 1583, with his Company, discovered a land of 15 provinces, replenished with Townes and Villages, with houses of 4 or 5 stories height. It lieth Northward, and some suppose that the same way men may by places inhabited go to the Lande termed De Labrador."

Another excessively rare book is entitled "For the Colony in Virginea, Britannia, Lawes Divine, Morall and Martian," printed in 1612, the only other known copy of which is in the British Museum. The book, written by William-Strachey, appears to be the earliest compilation of the settled laws of Virginia. Mr.

Huntington's volume is a unique presentation copy from the author to his friend, "sometimes a Personall Confederat and Adventurer," Thomas Lawson.

Other curious works are Jourdan's "Discovery of the Barmudas, otherwise called the Isle of Divels," the first account of the Bermudas, published in 1610, the only other copy being in the British Museum; a perfect set of De Bry's Voyages in 102 volumes; "A Friendly Farewell to Sir Francis Drake," London, 1585, believed to be unique; Frobisher's Voyages, printed in London in 1578, comprising a "true discourse of the late voyages of discoverie, for the finding a passage to Cathaya by the North-weast," valued at $5,000; Hariot's "Briefe and True Report of the New Found Land of Virginia," dated 1590; Hubbard's "Narrative of the Troubles with the Indians in New England," Boston, 1677, the first edition with the map of New England.

BOOK-TRADE ASSOCIATIONS

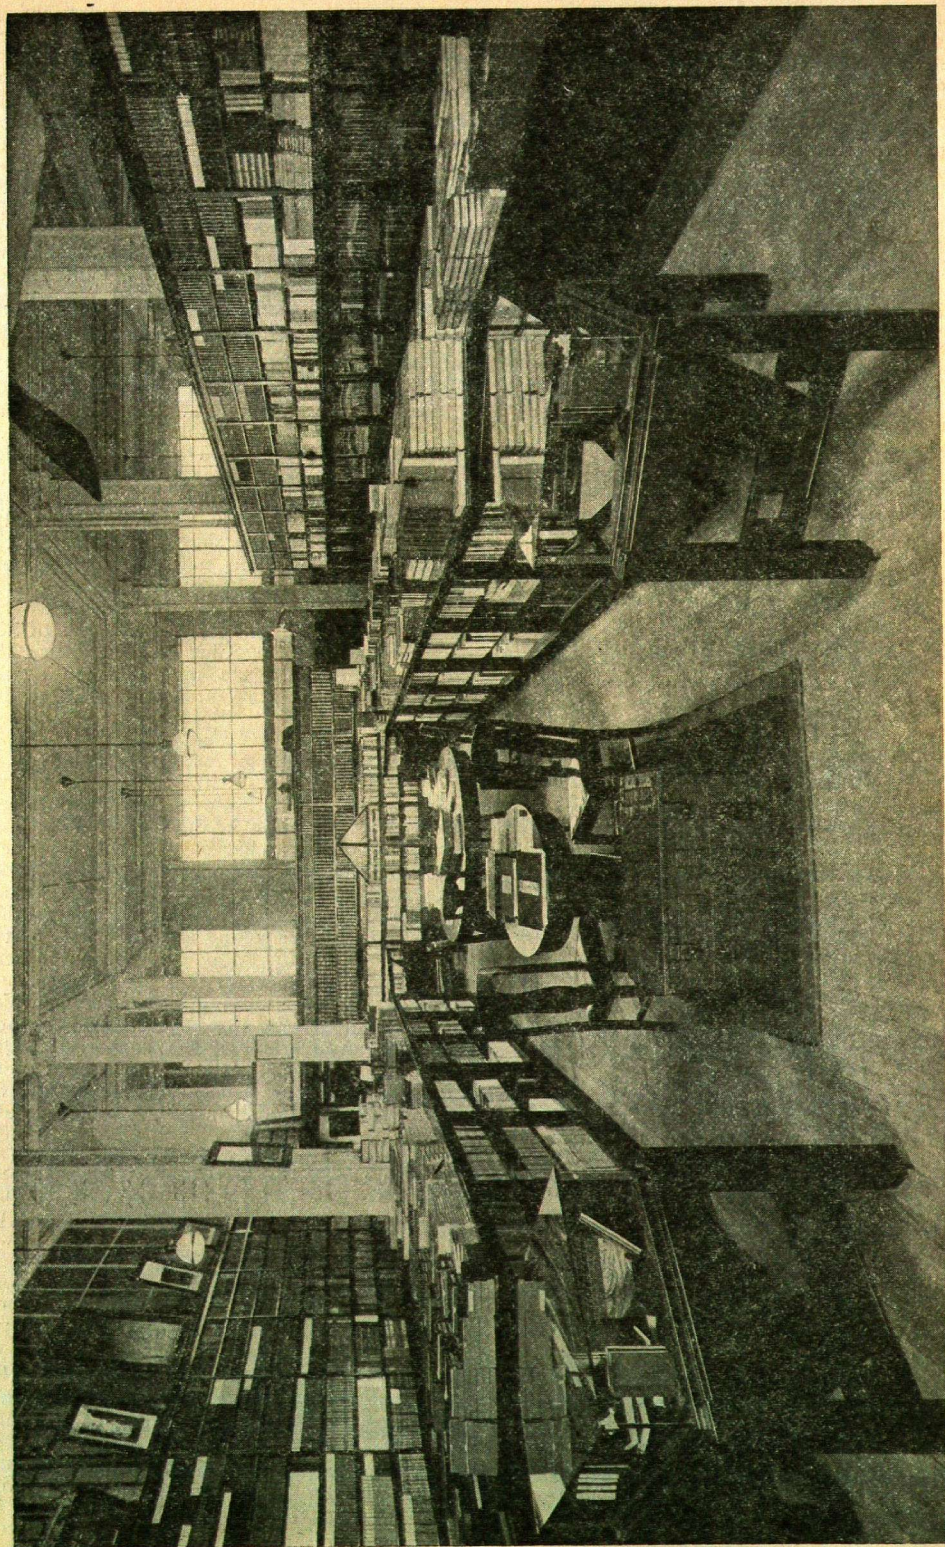

BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATION OF PHILADELPHIA CELEBRATES WINSTON NIGHT

NOVEMBER 17 was "Winston Night" with the Booksellers' Association of Philadelphia. It proved to be one of the best evenings the association has ever had. The speakers and a special menu were provided by the John C. Winston Co.

Mr. Winston was kept away by illness, but Mr. Marshall E. Scull presided in his place and introduced the three speakers of the evening—Professor Albert S. Bolles, of Haverford College; Rev. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut, D.D.; and Mr. William Dodge Lewis, of the William Penn High School, Philadelphia.

Professor Bolles talked on "Why Are Books Written: Their Successes and Failures," and amused the gathering with his genial stories of great writers and their difficulties, in which he mixed some very interesting personal reminiscences. Dr. Hurlbut has the distinction of being the author of a book that has sold half a million copies. He talked chiefly, however, about a book that last year sold more than twenty-seven million copies—namely, the Bible. His address was an interesting study of the Bible from the booksellers' standpoint—as a commercial proposition. Mr. Lewis made a vigorous plea for modern high school education and its support by the business man.

During the evening ten new members were proposed, as a result of a contest in which the entire membership of the association had a part. It is hoped to still further increase the membership within a short time. The evening closed with a vote of thanks to the John C. Winston Company.

OBITUARY NOTES

CHARLES NOEL FLAGG, widely known artist and portrait painter, died of heart disease in Hartford, Conn., on November 10. Mr. Flagg was the author of "The Evolution of the Equestrian Statue," 1909, and was a frequent contributor to art and other magazines.

DR. PERCIVAL LOWELL, founder and Director of the Lowell Observatory at Flagstaff, Arizona, and an astronomer of international reputation, died of apoplexy at Flagstaff on November 12. Dr. Lowell's chief claim to popular fame rests perhaps on his championship of the contention that Mars is inhabited in the controversy on the subject which began in 1907 after his announcement of observations made by the Lowell Observatory. Professor Lowell had put the theory forward tentatively as early as 1895. Nor were his investigations confined solely to Mars. Professor Lowell made discoveries concerning Mercury, Venus and Saturn, and financed several expeditions to odd corners of the earth for research and observation of all sorts of polar phenomena. He received the Jansen Medal of the French Astronomical Society in 1904 for his researches on Mars, and a gold medal in 1908 from the Sociedad Astronómica de Mexico. He was a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and a member of many other learned societies. Dr. Lowell, who was a brother of A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University, began life, after his graduation from Harvard in 1876, by several years of travel and scientific observation in all parts of the world, but particularly in China, Korea and Japan. Outside of his astronomical publications, his writings were mostly concerned with phases of mental life and thought. He was the author of: "Chosön," 1885; "The Soul of the Far East," 1886; "Noto," 1891; "Occult Japan," 1894; "Mars," 1895; "Annals of the Lowell Observatory," vol. I, 1898; vol. II, 1900; "The Solar System," 1903; "Annals of the Lowell Observatory," vol. III, 1905; "Mars and Its Canals," 1906; "Mars as the Abode of Life," 1908; "The Evolution of Worlds," 1909.

MOLLY ELLIOTT SEAWELL, author of widely read historical romances and stories for boys, died in Washington on Nov. 15 at the age of 56. Miss Seawell was born in Virginia. She started her literary career as a Washington correspondent, and then became a writer of short stories. In 1890 her "Little Jarvis" took a prize of $500 offered by Youth's Companion for the best story for boys; in 1895 her "Sprightly Romance of Marsac" took a prize of $3000 offered by the New York Herald; in 1908 she took a prize of $1000 offered by the New York Herald for a short story, "John Mainwaring, Financier." She was the author of the following books: "Little Jarvis," 1890; "Midshipman Paulding," 1891; "Paul Jones," 1892; "Maid Marian, Decatur and Somers," 1894; "A Strange, Sad Comedy," 1895; "The Sprightly Romance of Marsac," 1896; "A Virginia Cavalier," 1896; "The Rock of the Lion," 1897; "Twelve Naval Captains" (text-book at U. S. Naval Acad.), 1897; "Gavin Hamilton," 1899; "The House of Egremont," 1901; "Papa Bouchard," 1901; "Francezka," 1902; "Children of Destiny," 1903; "Fifi," 1903; "The Château of Monplaisir," 1905; "The Victory," 1906; "The Secret of Toni," 1907; "Last Duchess of Belgrade," 1908; "The Great Scoop," 1905; "History of the Lady Betty Stair," "Imprisoned Midshipmen," 1908; "The Jugglers," 1911; "Ladies' Battle," 1911; "Laurie Vane," 1901; "Quarterdeck and Fok'sle," "Through Thick and Thin," "Son of Columbus," 1912; "Diary of a Beauty," 1915; "Betty's Virginia Christmas," 1914; "Betty at Fort Blizzard," 1916. "Maid Marian" and the "Sprightly Romance of Marsac" were also done into plays.

HENRYK SIENKIEWICZ, author of "Quo Vadis" and other notable books, and the greatest novelist Poland has produced, died suddenly on November 15 at the Grand Hotel du Lac in Vevey, Switzerland. Since the outbreak of the war he had been tireless in his labors with Paderewski in behalf of the stricken people of his native Poland. Sienkiewicz was born at Wola Okrzejska, Government of Siedlce, in Lithuania, in 1845. He came of a distinguished family, one of the representatives being Charles Sienkiewicz, the Polish historian. He was educated at the Realgymnasium at Warsaw, and after his graduation studied philosophy at the university at that city. He made his literary début in 1872 with a humorous sketch, "Nobody Is a Prophet in His Own Country." He first came into notice in his own country, however, thru the publication in the Polish Gazette of Warsaw of his "charcoal sketches." These included "The Old Servant," "The Will of the People," and "Hania." In 1876 he came to the United States, and, with thirty other Poles, founded a colony in California for the establishment of a Polish commonwealth here. Helena Modjeska and her husband, the Count Bozenea, aided in founding the colony, which was abandoned in 1878. Sienkiewicz is best known in America as the author of "Quo Vadis," which has attained a sale of more than a million and a half copies here, and for the trilogy of Polish novels, "With Fire and Sword," "The Deluge," and "Pan Michael." He received the Nobel prize of $45,000 in 1905 for distinguished literary work. "Quo Vadis," published in 1895, brought its author greater fame than all his other works. He wrote it shortly after giving to the world "Without Dogma," a psychological novel of modern thought and a social study of contemporary life in Poland, "Children of the Soil." His next great book after "Quo Vadis" was "The Knights of the Cross," a two-volume romance of Poland and Germany that pictured how the growth of Christianity was retarded by crimes committed in the name of the Church. This appeared in 1899. In "On the Field of Glory," Sienkiewicz returned to the period in Polish history when King Sobieski reigned, just before the Turkish invasion. Two of his most recent books were

"The Desert and Wilderness" and "Whirlpools." Other books by him are: "Hania"; "In Vain," 1899; "Let Us Follow Him"; "Lillian Morris, and Other Stories"; "On the Bright Shore"; "Peasants in Exile"; "Sielanka, a Forest Picture, and Other Stories"; and "In Desert and Wilderness," 1912.

JACK LONDON died at his Glen Ellen, Cal., ranch on November 22, a victim of uremic poisoning. London was taken ill the preceding night and was found unconscious early the following morning by a servant. He did not regain consciousness. Besides his wife, Charmian London, he is survived by a sister and by a daughter, who is a student at the University of California, and by his mother. Jack London was born in San Francisco on January 12, 1876. His father might have been a character from one of his books: a wandering trapper and frontiersman, of English, Welsh, Dutch, Swiss, French and German ancestry. His mother was descended from Father Jones, a famous circuit riding preacher of early Ohio days. So Jack came honestly by his adventurous disposition, which he cultivated in boyhood on California ranches. Also, when his parents moved to Oakland, he took to reading "Cook's Voyages," "Du Chaillu's Travels" and other works of that stamp. He entered the University of California in 1896 and studied for a time, then heard the "call of the wild," and started for the Klondike. In 1892 he shipped before the mast and crossed the Pacific, spending some time in Japan, and then going sealing in Behring Sea. In 1893-94 he tramped thru the United States and Canada, making observations and gathering sociological material. He started for South Africa as a newspaper correspondent in the Boer War, but turned back because of the censorship; visited London to see the coronation of Edward VII, and then went to the Russo-Japanese War as a newspaper correspondent. Since then he lived largely in California, tho he never ceased to be a wanderer on land and sea. In 1900 he married Miss Bessie Maddern, of Oakland, Cal. They were divorced. His second wife, whom he married in 1905, was Miss Charmian Kittredge, of Chicago. With the latter he went on "The Cruise of the Snark." He was an ardent Socialist, and wrote and lectured much in behalf of that propaganda. In February, 1914, he was mentioned as a probable candidate for Governor of California on the Socialist ticket. He is also said to have sought the Prohibitionist nomination, declaring that he was forever thru with the intemperate ways which were set forth by him from life in "John Barleycorn." London's first publication was a magazine article in The Overland Monthly in 1899. Thereafter he wrote "The Son of the Wolf," 1900; "The God of His Fathers," 1901; "A Daughter of the Snows," "The Children of the Frost," and "The Cruise of the Dazzler," 1902; "The People of the Abyss," a Socialist work; "The Kempton-Wace Letters" and "The Call of the Wild," perhaps his best-known book, 1903; "The Faith of Men" and "The Sea Wolf," 1904; "The Game," "The War of the Classes," another Socialist work, and "Tales of the Fish Patrol," 1905; "Moon Face," 1906; "Before Adam," "Love of Life," "Iron Heel" and "The Road," 1907; "Martin Eden," "Lost Face" and "Revolution," 1909; "Burning Daylight," "Theft" and "When God Laughs," 1910; "Adventure" and "The Cruise of the Snark," 1911; "Smoke Bellew" and "A Son of the Sun," 1912; "The Night-Born," "The Abysmal Brute," "John Barleycorn" and "The Valley of the Moon," 1913; "The Strength of the Strong" and "The Mutiny of the Elsinore," 1914; "The Scarlet Plague" and "The Star Rover," 1915; "The Little Lady of the Big House," "The Acorn-Planter" and "The Turtles of Tasman," 1916.

HENRY KITCHELL WEBSTER, author of "The Real Adventure," has just passed the crisis in an unusually severe operation for appendicitis.

HARRY W. SULLY, who has been representing the American Wool and Cotton Reporter in Chicago for the past two years, will represent Charles E. Graham & Co., of New York, during 1917, covering the larger cities of the East and Middle West.

JOHN COWPER POWYS has been lecturing for the past month in Chicago and other cities of the Middle West. He returns to New York on November 14 to begin a course of six lectures on English and American authors in Carnegie Hall. Mr. Powys' audiences so frequently exceeded the capacity of the Hudson Theatre last season that it was necessary to engage the largest lecture auditorium in the city to accommodate the crowds desirous of hearing him.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE'S latest book "Stray Birds," to be published shortly by the Macmillan Co., is a volume of selected aphorisms embodying the essence of the Indian poet's philosophy. Mr. Willy Pogány has supplied a frontispiece in colors and decorative borders.

IN ACCORDANCE with the recommendation of the Sub-Committee on Affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, the Executive Committee of the Authors' League formally voted to give up the proposed referendum on the subject. It is probable now that the whole matter will drop.

FOLLOWING the lead of the London Times comes the news that at a meeting of representatives of British newspaper proprietors, held in London Nov. 20th, a resolution was passed recommending that the newspapers throughout the country raise their price by a halfpenny.

ALL THE Congressmen and Senators who have promised their support of the standard price measure now in the hands of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce have been re-elected, as indicated by returns received to date, according to E. A. Whittier, secretary of the American Fair Trade League.

PHILIPPINE BAMBOO is the latest addition to the possible materials for the manufacture of paper for the American market. The Bureau of Science of the Philippine Government has been investigating the pulp properties of bamboo, cogon grass, abaca and various palm fibres of the islands, but the bamboo plant seems best adapted for papermaking.

BOOKSELLERS with a Catholic clientele will do well to remember for their Christmas trade the monumental Catholic history of Rome, "Roma," published by Benziger Bros. and the two volumes of selections from the essays and sermons of Cardinal Gibbons, just published by the John Murphy Co., of Baltimore.

AN INTERESTING CHRISTMAS GIFT BOOK INNOVATION by the American Tract Society is the printing on the jacket of a small gift book of the words "A Merrie Christmas to—is the wish of—and a hope that you will enjoy this story as much as I did"—the blanks to be filled in by the giver of the book. The book in question is "When the Blind Saw," by David de Forest Burrell, the story of a blind beggar lad on the Bethlehem road.

C. W. BARDEEN, Syracuse, N. Y., has purchased the entire stock and plates of the Illustrated Supplement Company of that city, and will continue their publications, including "American History, Told in Pictures"; "Life of Abraham Lincoln"; "Heroes and Leaders of the Civil War"; "Gettysburg's Fiftieth Anniversary"; "Illustrated Story of the Discovery of America"; "From Manger to Throne."

E. P. DUTTON & Co. followed up "El Supremo" recently with another first novel by a new author, whom they also hail as a "find." With its scene laid in the Philippine Islands while they were still under the rule of Spain, "The Taming of Calinga" is a tale of the jungle in which the white man has no part. It is said to be a story of rapid action and brilliant color, reflecting the feverish heat of the heart of the tropics. C. L. Carlsen is the author.

THE LOTHROP, LEE & SHEPARD Co. will make their first increase on the retail price of their books on January 1, 1917, when the following titles will be raised from $1.20 to $1.25: "Midshipman Stanford," "The Independence of Nan," "Girls of the Morning-Glory Camp Fire"; the following from $1 to $1.25: "Yule-Tide in Many Lands," "Top-of-the-World Stories"; and the "Young Folks' Book of Ideals" from $2 to $2.50.

ACCORDING to a report just issued by the News-Print Manufacturers' Association, the news-paper mills of the country are running at practically maximum capacity, and have been all this year. Storage stocks are now near a minimum, but it is hoped that the usual slight mid-winter let-up will permit some recovery. During the first ten months of the year 1916 the mills reporting to this association produced 91.2 per cent. of their productive capacity, and shipped 93.1 per cent.

POSTER DISPLAY OF JACKSON GREGORY'S "THE SHORT CUT" (DODD, MEAD & CO.) BY THE G.W. ARMSTRONG NEWS CO. IN THE NORTH STATION, BOSTON.

THE CHRISTMAS TRADE will doubtless bring deservedly large sales for such handsomely illustrated volumes of verse as Masefield's "Salt Water Ballads," but no book of poetry published this fall, however gorgeously illustrated, deserves more sales than Robert Frost's "Mountain Interval," just published by Holt. "Mountain Interval" is neither illustrated nor elaborately bound—its claim to distinction rests rather on the fact that it contains some of the very best work Mr. Frost has yet done.

THE DEMAND FOR NEW FICTION is excellent, according to Little, Brown & Co, who report a fourth edition of Margaret Sherwood's "The Worn Doorstep"; a fifth printing of E. Phillips Oppenheim's "The Kingdom of the Blind"; a fifth printing of Fanny Heaslip Lea's New Orleans romance, "Chloe Malone"; an eighth printing of McHarg and Balmer's mystery novel, "The Blind Man's Eyes," and a second printing of B. M. Bower's western story, "The Heritage of the Sioux."

THE CENTURY Co. announces the approaching publication of "Modern Economic Problems," by Frank A. Fetter, professor of economics at Princeton University. Professor Fetter has attempted in this work to express not so much his own personal outlook and sympathies as those of our present-day American democratic society. A few of the problems discussed are: The Material Resources of the Nation, The Value of Money, The Functions of Banks, Social Insurance, The Problems of Monopoly, and Public Ownership.

ALTHO ANOTHER BOOK on "Germany Before the War" may seem somewhat superfluous, the new book of that title announced by Thomas Nelson & Sons is of unusual interest because of its author, Baron Beyens, Belgian Minister to Berlin, 1912-14. From his inside viewpoint the Belgian Minister discusses such subjects as the Prussian Court, the German Foreign Office, the Kaiser's Policy, and Events in Berlin at the Outbreak of the War. He has endeavored, he says in his introduction, "to remain strictly impartial."

W. J. WATT & Co. have conceived a new idea for luring on the reader. At the back of their latest novel, "High Speed," by Clinton H. Stagg, they have inserted a few pages from a former novel by the same author, "Silver Sandals." This tidbit is prefaced by the author's portrait and a short account of his career. The incautious reader, swallowing the bait, is held fast by the thread of the story and must sacrifice another $1.25 before he is released.

THE LATEST SCHOOL OF POETRY is "The Spectrists." Its members deny any connection with all the other of the late and later schools of poetry—the Futurists, the Imagists, the Vorticists, etc. The writers of the Spectrist school follow the musical convention by giving no titles to their poems, but calling them merely "Opus 1," "Opus 2," etc. A book of verses entitled "Spectra," by two authors of this school, is to be published this month by Mitchell Kennerley.

THE NEW YORK Evening Post has recently paid to the proprietors of Punch, London, $450 for the use of drawings and cartoons taken from that periodical during a period of several months following the registry of Punch's American copyright in November, 1914. This is at the rate of $10 each. The Evening Post is said to have offered to pay for these drawings at a lower rate, but Punch declined to compromise the matter even tho the drawings were reproduced in reduced and comparatively obscure form. The drawings had all been duly credited at the time, but no payment for their reproduction had been arranged.

MEMBERS of the New York Booksellers' League who heard Leslie Buswell's interesting talk and saw the motion pictures of the American Ambulance Service at the last dinner of the league will doubtless be glad to spread the news of a benefit to be held at the Strand Theatre, in New York City, Friday afternoon, December 8, the proceeds to be devoted entirely to the maintenance of the American Ambulance Field Service Corps, now in France. At the benefit William Faversham is to recite a poem, "Un Blessé à Montauville," by Mr. Emory Pottle, published in "Friends of France." The films to be shown will have their first public exhibition at this time.

THE INCORPORATED SOCIETY OF FRENCH AUTHORS (Association corporative des Ecrivains français) has just been organized in Paris to aid in the circulating and popularizing of the work of the younger writers. To that end it is proposed to send out catalogs listing these works by the younger and lesser known authors to bookbuyers thruout France. The organizers of the society, which has its headquarters at rue Vineuse, 29, Paris, are: Mmes. Aurel, Marguerite Burnat-Provins, MM. Guillaume Apollinaire, Barzun, André Billy, Canudo, Blaise Cendrars, Guy Charles Cros, Fernand Divoire, Louis Mandin, Eugène Marsan, Alexandre Mercereau, O. W. Milosz, Francis de Miomandré, Eugène Montfort, Edmond Pilon, Georges Polti, André Salmon, André Spire, Henri Strentz, Jérôme et Jean Tharaud, Charles Vildrac, Sébastien Vovrol.

AN ADMIRABLE set of juveniles for display during Good Book Week is the series of Work and Play Books published by Doubleday, Page & Co. The books make an especially good Christmas gift for a family of children as the wide range of their subjects enables them to reach every child between 8 and 14, no matter what his or her tastes may be. The various titles in the series are: "Carpentry," "Electricity," "Mechanics," "Needlecraft," "Gardening," "Outdoor Sports," "Home Decoration," "Outdoor Work," "Housekeeping" and "Working in Metal." The authors include such men and women as Prof. J. F. Woodhull, former professor of physics at Columbia; Mary Rogers Miller, nature study lecturer at Cornell, and F. T. Hodgson, editor of The American Builder and Woodworker and The National Builder.

A SPECIAL COMMITTEE of the national stationers' association appointed to hold a prize contest for the best retail store plans for stationery business, and the best fixture plan for any articles entering into the stationery business, has just announced its awards, which for obvious reasons, are not without interest to the book-trade. For the best store plans for double stores, that is, for stores measuring over 47 feet in width, the first prize of $50 was awarded to R. W. Huff, care of H. K. Brewer & Company, New York. No award was made for plans for a single store, because the committee did not deem any of the plans submitted to be of sufficient merit. The single store plans were to be adapted to stores 22 feet wide or less. The committee awarded the best fixture plan, prize of $25, to the L. E. Waterman Company of New York, on a show case and wall case for the display of fountain pens and fountain pen accessories.

THE GARDENSIDE BOOKSHOP at 270 Boylston Street, Boston, the new shop conducted by Miss Bertha Beckford, who for a number of years has conducted the Wellesley College Bookstore, held a "private opening" on Saturday, November 4, preparatory to the regular opening the following Monday. The patrons and patronesses of the Gardenside Bookshop are Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Cabot, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Davenport, Miss Olive Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Farnham Greene, Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Hamlen, Mr. and Mrs. Alpheus H. Hardy, Miss Caroline Hazard, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Lowell, Miss Ellen Fitz Pendleton, and Miss Cornelia Warren. The attractive announcement of the new venture states that it is "a bookshop large enough to accommodate a representative stock of standard works and new publications. Small enough to suggest the calm atmosphere of the private library. Modern enough to present numerous new features in equipment and service. Old-fashioned enough to offer a welcome to all who wish to browse at leisure among well-selected books. You are cordially invited to visit us."

THE TYPOTHETAE, the Printers' League, and the Graphic Arts Association, the three New York City organizations of employing printers, effected a consolidation a week ago Thursday night at a meeting at the Arkwright Club. The new federation will be known as the Association of Employing Printers of New York. Officers of the association elected were: G. F. Kalkhoff, of the Kalkhoff Company, president; George W. Green, of the Home Talk Publishing Company, vice-president; F. C. Stevens, of the Federal Printing Company, treasurer. The Typothetæ was formed more than fifty years ago and has led in such work as scientific cost finding, estimating, and the encouragement of systematic apprentice instruction. The Printers' League, organized in 1906, will maintain an entity which will permit it as formerly to make contract and arbitration agreements with labor unions. There will be two other membership sections in the new association, one for open shops and the other for print shops of moderate size, and allied trades may become affiliated. The object of the consolidation is to reduce office and organization expenses and to take united action in legislative matters, the dissemination of credit information, educational work in the trade, and similar activities.

THE MANAGER of Messrs. Cassell & Co., Ltd., has applied to the Comptroller-General of Patents for a license to publish a translation of an enlarged edition of Prince Bülow's "Deutsche Politik." Mr. Spurgeon said that Messrs. Cassell bought the copyright for the British Empire of this work of Prince Bülow, and published it in this country in January, 1914, under the title "Imperial Germany." After the war they brought out a popular edition. Then Prince Bülow produced a revised edition in Germany, with a special introduction. He made a good many remarkable alterations. Messrs. Cassell & Co. now applied for a license to publish translations of the edition. It was agreeable to the Foreign Office that this enlarged work should be published in England. The Comptroller announced that the court would recommend the issue of a license to Messrs. Cassell. The Public Trustee would grant a license, which would be a complete and permanent license, on the basis of a payment suggested by the publisher. Application has also been made by Messrs. King & Son, Ltd., for license to publish Naumann's "Mittel-Europa," and by C. Arthur Pearson to issue "Die Fahrt der Deutschland." The Comptroller of Patents said he would consider in what terms the licenses should be issued.

RARE books, letters and manuscripts, including many items from the library of the late William Matthews, the noted American writer, realized a total of $9500 at a sale in the Walpole Galleries, New York City, Nov. 17. George D. Smith paid $2160 for a first edition of W. M. Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," complete in the original twenty parts in nineteen as issued, with the sketches by Thackeray, London, 1847-1848. This is twice the previous

Each part has the original wrappers in the first state, and in perfect condition, and at page 78 is inserted a proof on China paper of the cut on that page. This copy has four pages of advertisements, apparently not known in any other copy. The plates are also all the original issues in their first states as executed by Thackeray.

Of course, Mr. George Allen England is himself the author of "The Alibi."

Christmas books for all boys and girls for every day in the year and for every hour of the day

THE WORK and PLAY BOOKS

A set of eleven splendid volumes, loved by boys and girls alike, not only because they are intensely interesting, but because they increase the enjoyment of things already possessed.

Perhaps the boy owns or expects to receive a set of carpenter tools or an electrical outfit. By showing him how to use these things as they should be used—how to make real things of wood and how to produce real results with electricity, "Carpentry" by Prof. Edwin W. Foster, or, "Electricity" by Prof. John F. Woodhull, Ph.D., will increase his enjoyment a hundred fold.

Perhaps the girl has been wishing for a sewing basket or is interested in cooking. "Needlecraft" by Effie Archer Archer, or "Housekeeping" by Elizabeth Hale Gilman will tell her many new and interesting things and will add zest to the things with which she busies herself.

There are also volumes on "Gardening," "Home Decoration," "Mechanics," "Outdoor Sports," etc. All are by men and women of broad, practical experience in vocational training.

These are not text-books. They are written in a story-book fashion and are read with great interest by all young people, who follow the experiences of the young folks in the books, while learning the best ways of using a saw, sewing a seam, preparing a meal or planting a garden.

They are so thorough that they are often used by adults as reference books.

FROM INTRODUCTION

"The following selections from my Essays and Sermons have been put together, in the first place, because I thought that some of them might be valuable for the history of the many years through which it has pleased God to spare my life. I have lived a long time, and I have lived through a very critical time, not only have I held office many years, but I have held office during a time of transition when the old order was changed."

We believe that no concern possesses an asset that is comparable in value with a long list of satisfied customers.

To the Trade

The Only Complete and Authentic English Version

THE LIVING CORPSE By Leo. N. Tolstoi

Translated from the Russian by Mrs. E. M. Evarts. 2nd Edition

"THE LIVING CORPSE" (ZHIVOI TRUP) is, like all of Count Tolstoi's best works, autobiographical. The noblest part of the principal character, Fedya, is Tolstoi himself, and the final sad episode of the great author's life goes far to show that his domestic experience was not as glowingly happy as some biographers would make it.

There is no question as to the tremendous power and simple impressiveness of this posthumous work, the literary sensation of the day.

As a protest against certain marriage and divorce laws, the absurdity of which is portrayed with a satiric pen, "The Living Corpse" is a most effective document. Cloth, 75 cents net.

Two New Books of Poetry

VIE DE BORDEAUX. By Pitts Sanborn

A volume of free verse showing old Bordeaux in war time. The Poems are executed with remarkable fidelity to rhythm, and in their quiet but compelling realism they voice the soul of France, who has conquered the fear of death. It is perhaps in the depicting of the intrepid grief of French womanhood that the author strikes his most poignant note. Copper Brown Boards, net $1.00.

NINE POEMS FROM A VALETUDINARIUM By Donald Evans

In this latest volume we have Donald Evans, the arch attitudinist, the maker of glittering and feverishly adroit phrases, suddenly become grave and simple, unaffected and humble. Those who know his previous work will say some fundamental upheaval of spirit has occurred in the poet. Is he now emerging from behind his awful barriers? Has he conquered life, himself? About this book there is a halo of beauty and an ennobling music that mark only poetry of indisputable fineness. For the first time this sardonic singer writes in a mood of supreme reverence. Neapolitan Blue Boards, net $1.00.

A REMARKABLE AND TIMELY BOOK

Germany Before the War

By BARON BEYENS, Belgian Minister to Berlin, 1912-1914

Describing the Prussian Court, The German Foreign Office, The Kaiser's Policy, and Events in Berlin at the Outbreak of the War.

"In the present work I have endeavored, as others have done before me, to trace the causes and to assign the responsibility for the disastrous events that we are witnessing.

"At the same time, I have attempted to sketch the psychology of the principal German actors in the tragedy of 1914. I can sincerely say that I have taken every care to remain strictly impartial, . . . and to make due allowance for the policy imposed upon Germany during the last fifteen years, and for external events that have had their influence since the beginning of the century."—From the Introduction.

A prompt and complete exposure by a diplomat who was one of the chief actors in the dramatic incidents he records. Price, $1.50 net.

EARL OF ROSEBERY, K.G.
